One who is aggrieved at the world is discontent with the judgment of God, and one who complains about misfortunes that befall him is complaining about his Lord.

One who approaches a rich man and abases himself to him because of his riches loses a third of his religion.

One who reads the Qur'an yet falls into Hellfire when he dies was one of those who took the signs of God as a joke.

One whose heart is stuck to love of the world finds three things from it stuck to his heart:
uneasiness that is never absent from him, desire that never leaves him,
and expectations that are never completely fulfilled.
